DECEASED FLOODS OF THE OIL TRUST

Senator Penrose Declares $150,000 Was Urgently Solicited For Roosevelt in 1904

HAD ALREADY MADE $125,000 CONTRIBUTION

Senator Asserts That $100,000 of This Went to National Committee and That He Used the Remaining $25,000 in Pennsylvania—Flinn, He Says, Offered $1,000,000 or $2,000,000 For Election as United States Senator

Washington, Aug. 21.—In a careful, deliberate speech in the senate late today Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania replied to the charges made regarding a certificate of deposit for $100,000 sent to him by John D. Archibald of the Standard Oil company in 1904.

Senator Penrose admitted receiving that sum from Mr. Archibald, but asserted that it was part of a contribution of $125,000 made by Archibald to the republican national campaign fund, $100,000 of which amount, he said, went to the republican national committee and $25,000 to himself for use in Pennsylvania.

Demanded $150,000 More. President Roosevelt had been advised of the contribution, Senator Penrose declared. He said that later Cornelius N. Egan, then treasurer of the national committee, asked for another contribution of $150,000 from Archibald and his associates interested in the Standard Oil company.

"The demand was urgent, insistent, I may say imperative, and it was represented that it came direct from President Roosevelt," declared Senator Penrose.

Attacks Boss Flinn.

William Flinn, Roosevelt leader in Pennsylvania, was asked by Penrose. The senator charged that Flinn had offered him and Isaac W. Durham $1,000,000 or $2,000,000 if they would favor his candidacy to the senate to succeed Senator Penrose.

He read what purported to be copies of telegrams to show that Flinn asked John D. Archibald to assist him in securing the election of Senator Penrose. He also attacked E. A. Van Valkenburg, editor of the Philadelphia North American, and referred to the "offensive" character and mendacity of the Van Valkenburg-Flinn combination.

Premised Further Disclosures.

The galleries of the senate were filled and were bright with feminine faces in response to the disclosures made by Senator Penrose.

"The floor was crowded with senators and members of the senate," he said. "The floor was crowded with senators and members of the senate."

"Where are they now?" asked Senator Penrose.

"They are hidden in the archives of campaign committees, in the cellars and vaults of business men, and in the offices of lawyers," he said.

"I suppose either to Mr. Durham or to myself," responded Senator Penrose.

Managua, Nicaragua, Monday, Aug. 13.—(Delayed in Transmission).—News of the insurgents' defeat at Leon, 50 miles to the northwest of Managua, on Aug. 17, when the insurgents slaughtered almost the entire garrison of the city, was confirmed today.

At 3 o'clock on Saturday morning, when the troops were camped on the plain in the center of Leon, the rebels, heavily armed, quietly occupied the surrounding buildings. SCHEPPS WAS ALLOWED TO ESCAPE

ACCEPTED STATEMENT HIS NAME WAS SMITH

Detective Apologized For Disturbing Him Although He Knew Schepps Well—Whitman Offers $5,000 Reward For "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood," But Barr Police From It—Thinks Police Have Known Their Whereabouts

New York, Aug. 21.—Charging that "some members" of the New York police department "deliberately permitted the escape of 'Gyp the Blood' and 'Lefty Louie,' the missing gun men indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, District Attorney Whitman today announced the offer of a reward of $5,000 for the capture of the fugitives, who have now been at large one month and five days.

Police Not Eligible to Reward.

"I am now in a position to offer a reward of $5,000 for the apprehension of Louis Rosenberg or Rosenberg, alias 'Lefty Louie,' and Harry Horowitz, alias 'Gyp the Blood,' who were indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the city of New York revealed by the police department of the city of New York or anyone in the employ of the police department, and will not be paid any such member or to any of the police department's employees.

Police Knew Their Whereabouts.

"In making this position, I am actuated by no feeling of unkindness toward the police department, but it is my belief that if proper police work had been done, the escape of these men would have been prevented. The city of New York is paying millions of dollars annually to the police department, whose duty it is to provide for the safety of the city, and I cannot escape the conclusion that some members of the police department have known, if they do not now know, the whereabouts of these men."

Money Subscribed by Citizens.

The generosity of private citizens made it possible for the district attorney to offer the reward, which will be a report to the district attorney's office. The district attorney's office is not provided with funds for the purpose, and the prosecutor has more than once expressed his surprise that no reward has been offered for the capture of the men, the only two missing of the seven accused of the Rosenthal murder.

Detectives Allowed Schepps to Escape.

One of the district attorney's reasons for suspecting that the police have allowed the escape of these men, was stated tonight, when it became known that Sam Schepps in his testimony said that three detectives from New York police headquarters had recognized him while he was hiding in Fallsburg, N. Y., and had deliberately allowed him to escape. These detectives were three of the five sent to the region to arrest him on the charge of murder which the police had accused him of.

Detectives Apologized to Schepps.

Schepps told the jury, it is understood, that he and the detectives knew each other well, and that they had accepted his flattery and declaration that he was "Mr. Smith," and in return, he stated tonight, when it became known that Sam Schepps in his testimony said that three detectives from New York police headquarters had recognized him while he was hiding in Fallsburg, N. Y., and had deliberately allowed him to escape. These detectives were three of the five sent to the region to arrest him on the charge of murder which the police had accused him of.

Becker Claimed He Could Control Waldo.

On another occasion Schepps declared that Becker, in speaking of Rosenthal, had said that he had killed him. The juror should have been killed long ago. No one else has been killed, anyway. Becker, the witness testified, had said to him, "I'll kill you then in hiding in Harry Pollock's not to give himself up. I can control Waldo."

To Be Arraigned Today.

Becker and his six alleged tools, indicted yesterday by the grand jury, will be arraigned for pleading before Judge Maguire tomorrow morning, and immediately afterward the grand jury will reconvene to consider evidence in the case of the Rosenthal murder.

First Trial Set Aug. 15th.

Whether Becker or one of the alleged slayers of Rosenthal will be first brought to trial is now a question in the mind of Mr. Whitman, but it seems likely that the police lieutenant's case will be the first.

Flyn's Action Causes a Stir.

The news from Washington that Flyn, chief of the New York division of the United States secret service, was to resign, caused a sensation in police circles here tonight. Flyn served as second deputy police commissioner from October, 1906, to May, 1911, and was in the New York revealed by the grand jury today by Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty. His public resignation, however, was not announced until he had been arrested and his efforts to close up gambling resorts had been interfered with.
